Description :

PDF-5d461 | When he was five, William H. Gilmore's mother told him one of life's great truths—that sometimes people have to die for their country. It was a profound moment for the boy, and a lesson he carried with him through life. Growing up in the years after World War II, Gilmore would learn much from his mother, a hardworking beautician who instilled a sense of discipline in her son. His love of spe... Dear Jason and Jodi: A Memoir
